Kendoll King is a professional vocalist, songwriter, music producer and vocal coach from Philadelphia, who has been performing since the age of five years old. Trained in both classical and contemporary voice, "Ken" has used his years of musical studies to propel his passions of writing, producing, and arranging pop music. Ken took his first voice lesson at nine years old, and over the past two decades, he has been privileged to work with some of the top industry instructors. In 2013, Kendoll took his studies full circle and began teaching voice, and since has had students excel in all vocal styles, including Voiceover Acting. From leading musical theatre roles to fronting rock bands, Ken has always been intrigued by the vast spectrum of opportunities in the world of performance art and has made it his mission to continue to grow as a performer.

Ken left his hometown of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to pursue music professionally at Berklee College of Music in Boston, graduating in 2015. Ken's time in Boston has allowed him to become established as a well-versed performer in all genres, contributing both lead and background vocals in various pop, jazz, rock, and R&B ensembles across the US and overseas. He has performed alongside both up and coming and major artists including Charlie Puth, as well as working on his own original music.

Ken's latest venture allowed him to produce an award-winning comedy album while continuing to perform along the East Coast. Vocally, Ken is influenced by 'the greats,' such as Freddie Mercury, Stevie Wonder, Prince, Michael Jackson, and more. He genuinely enjoys performing their music, as well as working on his original upcoming pop releases.
